

Tuning Fork Practitioner Training

What is Sound Therapy?

Sound therapy uses different types of sound to create a therapeutic change. You can use a single instrument or combination of different ones, tuning forks, a piece of music, even the sound of your own voice to achieve a change.

How does it Work?

It works on the principle of 'sympathetic resonance' one vibrating object producing spontaneous movement in another. Whether you pluck a string, hit a drum, or hum a note you produce a spectrum of vibrations that radiate out from their source, influencing everything they touch. Whenever we listen to music or any type of sound, it initiates a global response throughout our whole system. The effect is rapid because sound uses the body's own pathways to travel at the speed of sound. We're literally "wired" for sound!

Why use Tuning Forks?

A tuning fork produces a single sound frequency. Their precision makes them a reliable 'tool' for producing accurate, 'pure' sound (very few harmonics). Our tuning forks are designed to be used as a series of pairs, maintaining the same frequency relationship, which produces a 'standing wave' of organized movement throughout your whole body.

What are the Benefits?

Our tuning forks promote a balanced movement of expansion & contraction radiating through the core of the body that helps regulate the central nervous system, rapidly producing a state of deep relaxation.

When deeply relaxed, your body can regulate itself more easily, releasing accumulated stress & tension, to function more efficiently. Treatments can be tailored to improve both your physical health and/or your emotional well-being.
